SATURDAY MORNING, APRIL 26, 1862

The County Convention.

The Union party meet in convention to-day by delegates to make nominations for county officers. This is one of the most important conventions that ever assembled in this county; important by reason of the issues at which the nation has arrived; important in respect to the offices to be filled in the county, and important in respect to the influences it may have in the vote for State officers. Already some feeling has been manifested, which, unless controlled by the good sense and patriotism of our citizens, may produce results which every true Union man would deprecate.

Our advice is not asked, and we are not forward, generally to tender it, but we may be allowed to say to our friends, and all having a part in the convention, Do all you can honorably to secure your ends, before the vote for candidates is taken; but in all things act fairly and honorably; be just and demand justice, and then abide the issue and vote for the nominees.

The News

We have important news from the seat of war to which we give most of our space. The accounts of the great battle on the Tennessee—our disasters on the 6th and brilliant victory on the 7th—are confirmed. The army of Beauregard was considerably larger than at first supposed, and seems to have been composed of the greater portion of the rebel force in the Southwest. The Federals were taken by surprise, in consequence of the neglect of Generals Prentiss and Sherman, who were in command of the advanced brigades, five or six miles from the Landing. Though within a few miles of the enemy, they had no pickets thrown out, and were not aware of Beauregard's approach until he attacked them. Our forces were completely panic-struck, and fled in wild confusion and disorder, resulting in a terrible slaughter. The gunboats opened their batteries and brought the enemy to a stand near the river, and our forces rallied and fought a gallant fight during the balance of the day. At the close of the day, Beauregard was in possession of the Federal camp, thinking that he had won a complete victory. This thought was not of long duration. During the night, Buell's brigade, under Mitchell, Wallace and Nelson, crossed the river while the gunboats played a telling fire on the enemy, and took a strong position ready to renew the contest at daybreak on the 7th. The battle was again commenced then, and after a terrible and desperate struggle, the rebels were forced to give up the field and flee, pursued by Buell's cavalry. The accounts of the number lost on both sides, differ somewhat. The most reliable report is that of a correspondent of an Eastern paper who was taken prisoner and afterwards escaped. He estimates the rebel loss at four thousand killed and twelve thousand wounded, with most of their artillery. Our loss is said to be ten thousand—two thousand of which were made prisoners by the enemy on the day previous. Gen. Wallace, who was reported killed, is rapidly recovering from his wounds. The death of S. A. Johnston is confirmed. It is reported that General Buell has taken Corinth with all its stores and munitions of war. This, however, needs confirmation. Gen. McClellan was operating before the rebel works on the York peninsula, on the York and James rivers. Jeff Davis, Gen. Joe Johnson and Gen. Lee, were also at this point, and the rebel army was daily increasing by the troops from abandoned lines in Virginia. The British Parliament had given a good deal of attention to the recent fight between the Monitor and Merrimac. It was proposed to institute an inquiry into the facts brought out by that novel combat.

A new Koran, a compromise between Christianity, Mahomedanism and Judaism, has been published in England. It separates spiritual religion from dead form and superstitions, offers a common ground of reconciliation to Christians, Jews and Turks.

A large crowd of Salmon river emigrants are in Shasta Valley on their way north. The wagons will pass through town, while many companies who are on horseback will take the Klamath Lake route via Sheep Rock. Several families are with the crowd, and it is estimated that there are nearly 3,000 persons on the road between this place and Sacramento.—Yreka Journal.

A special dispatch to the New York papers says the country between Manassas and Warrenton has been effectually cleared of rebel scouts.

By Overland Telegraph.

The following dispatches are from the Sacramento Union of the 17th:

CAIRO, April 11.—Seven hundred wounded from Pittsburg, arrived in the Mound City last night. Orders have been sent to Louisville and Chicago to prepare for 6,000 more.

Operations before Yorktown, Va.

FORTRESS MONROE, April 11.—Parties who have arrived from the army report no special change in affairs. Continued skirmishing was going on. The rebel position extends across the peninsula from Yorktown to Warwick near James river. The formation of land and peculiar bend, enables them to command with their fortifications all the roads up the peninsula. Gens. Lee and Johnson are both reported there—one commanding Yorktown and the other at Warwick. Magruder holds a subordinate command, and is with a reserve at Williamsburg. According to reports of deserters, the rebel forces number fifty thousand, of whom thirty thousand are reinforcements from the Rappahannock. Our Generals are pushing forward in preparations for an assault upon the enemy's works. Not many days will elapse before Yorktown will be ours and Richmond threatened. Our sharpshooters hold advance positions under the rebel batteries from which they continually harrass the enemy. One sharpshooter belonging to a California regiment, has almost wholly prevented the rebels from using a large gun in an important position. From a well selected rifle pit he keeps a constant watch on the gun. For two days scarcely an attempt has been made to fire it without the rebels losing some of their men by his well directed shots.

The latest figures give the rebels 55,000, which are daily being increased from Richmond. Information received through deserters, scouts and contrabands, show the enemy has nearly 500 guns.

Troops arrived at Yorktown from Richmond and Gordonsville every day last week. It is believed Jeff. DAVIS and Gen. Joe Johnson are both at Yorktown—Johnson in command. The number of troops there cannot be less than one hundred thousand. [Rather extravagant.]

Late from New Mexico.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., April 10.—The Santa Fe mail has arrived. The Texans, 1,000 strong, evacuated Santa Fe and were marching down river. It was reported Col Canby had intercepted an express with orders to command the Texan forces to evacuate the Territory and return to Texas. Col Slough had left Fort Union, with 1,400 men, to effect a junction with Col Canby. The Texans were exacting contributions and forced loans from the inhabitants. As high as $20,000 was exacted from single individuals residing near Albuquerque. Clothing and provisions were taken from merchants, without regard to politics or circumstances.

Southern News---Operations in Virginia.

WASHINGTON, April 10.—Contrabands who have come inside our lines from Port Royal in the last few days from Charleston, say the people of that city are dreading an attack from our forces. They complained bitterly that nearly all the troops were in Virginia or the West.

Rebel reports state that a battle took place between 500 Texas cavalry and Sickles' Brigade, near Stafford Court house. They state their loss at 13 and the Federal loss at 350.

The effective force of rebels is between Fredericksburg and Aquia Creek, less than 4,000; beyond Fredericksburg to Richmond, 10,000, including a few batteries of artillery. There is no scarcity of provisions. General Wigfall, in command of a brigade several miles from Fredericksburg, it is understood, has resigned, in consequence of a misunderstanding with his superior officer.

BALTIMORE, April 10.—The Old Point boat has arrived, and reports from Gen. McClellan's army state that our forces are bearing their exposure undauntedly and their enthusiasm to meet the enemy is unabated.

Capture of Beaufort, South Carolina.

NEW YORK, April 10th.—A letter from Beaufort, April 1st, says the place was occupied Thursday night by a detachment of Packer's Brigade. They landed without opposition and even without finding a guard stationed to challenge their approach. Leading men of the city called on Major Allen, commander of the forces, and tendered him and his troops the freedom of the city. Every evidence of good will is exhibited by the people towards our troops. The whole reception was most courteous and gratifying. Citizens of the place said they had never given in their adhesion to the rebel Government, and claimed to be good Union men. Large numbers daily come to headquarters and take the oath of allegiance. On Saturday and Sunday a guard crossed from Beaufort and took possession of the beach south west of Fort Macon, cutting off rebel communication with their meat supplies. Two British ships were found at Beaufort loaded with rosin and turpentine.

Further from New Mexico.

ST. LOUIS, April 10th.—A letter from Fort Union, New Mexico, March 23d, says the column there is breaking up camp for a movement against the rebels to the southward.—The Texans occupied a strong position in the vicinity of Albuquerque. Their intention seems to be to march on either column leaving Forts Union or Craig, and by their superior force, which is estimated at 2,400 strong, with twenty pieces artillery, thus defeating both before they can form a junction.

Island No. 10.

Our forces on Island Number Ten continue to bring in valuable property hidden by the retreating rebels. Yesterday two splendid batteries of light artillery, rifled cannon, were discovered in the woods.

Matters at Fortress Monroe and Yorktown.

WASHINGTON, April 12th.—Specials to the New York papers say the present position of the Merrimac controls the mouth of James river, and she will probably remain where she is to prevent our gunboats from going up the river for the purpose of shelling the rebel right wing which rests on the right bank near Warwick. A gentleman who left Fortress Monroe asserts our troops are in the best spirits. In consequence of the storm much delay has been occasioned.

Gloucester Point, directly opposite Yorktown, is strongly fortified. The river not being over three quarters of a mile wide, the rebel batteries have fair sweep of any gunboats attempting to get near Yorktown. The country between James and York rivers is known to be of a soft marshy character during rainy weather, it is almost impossible to move artillery. It can readily be imagined what the difficulties against which our army contended.

Congressional.

WASHINGTON, April 8.

In the House, the Pacific Railroad Bill was considered.

Campbell of Pennsylvania advocated its construction as a military and commercial necessity, and referred to facts and figures to show the large amounts that would be saved the Government by this means of communication. He stated that the bill was, after a careful consideration, reported by the unanimous consent of the Committee. They took for their guide the bill heretofore reported by Gen. Curtis. It contemplates two branches uniting with a main trunk, which is to be located within three thousand miles west of the Missouri river. Campbell explained all its provisions and appealed to gentlemen to give the bill their consideration.

Sumner's bill removing disabilities of color for carrying the mails, passed the Senate to-day—24 to 11—Latham, Nesmith, and Stark voting no.

WASHINGTON, April 12.

The President sent to the Senate, yesterday, a treaty negotiated by Secretary Seward and Lord Lyons, for the more effectual suppression of the slave trade.

The Senate yesterday ratified a commercial treaty with the Ottoman Porte. It is extremely liberal in its provisions, and has a continuance for fifty years. The Mexican Extraordinary Treaty was also ratified.

The bill amending the Fugitive Slave Law, by establishing jury trial and debarring rebels from recovering fugitives, has been introduced.

Foreign News.

NEW YORK, April 11.

The Asia has arrived from Liverpool with dates to the 29th, and Queenstown to the 30th.

Lord Palmerston has been ill, but was sufficiently recovered to attend a Cabinet Council on the 28th.

Sir F. Smith has given notice in the House of Commons that he would call attention to the engagement between the Monitor and Merrimac and ask whether, in consequence of the results, the Government had not better suspend the construction of plated ships until the question of iron clad gunboats was considered.

LIVERPOOL, March 30.

Rebel Iroquois C. S. Evans was passed on on the 4th of March, en route to Bombay. There was an unknown American ship alongside. The Union flag was lowered when the ships parted company.

The Times has a sarcastic editorial on taxes about to be imposed on Americans, and maintains they will not be submitted to.

A CARD.

I would say to my friends in the Willamette Valley, and to all who are afflicted with diseases of the bronchial tubes and lungs, that Dr. J. Flattery will be in Portland on the 1st of April, and will be prepared to relieve and cure the most afflicted. Dr. Flattery's system of inhalation has accomplished wonders. My health, all was well known, I came to Portland on the only encouragement which I left Oregon in the fall of '59. My friends supposed that I could not live long. The use of this system of inhalation so prescribed by Dr. Flattery, have so far restored me to be able to many months to pursue my business with comfort and satisfaction. I could say to all Oregonians and in the Sacramento Valley who were considered incurable, who have by Dr. Flattery been restored to their friends and health, go and I say to the afflicted try this new system and live.

H. S. PIKE.

N. B.—The above card was taken down by Dr. Flattery nor do she know that it is written. He is prompted by gratitude and a regard for the afflicted.

How to go to the Mines.—Miners who now propose going to Salmon River, Rhodes Creek and the other mining regions, should not start out unprepared to travel the night cold and stormy out country, for it is known by all who have come from above at the Cascades that the country is now bare of all kinds of provisions, by its supplies having been cut off by the late flood, stoppage of navigation thereon we would caution all who wish to go through comfortably, and return with their pockets full of Bucks, to call at HARPER BROTHERS', opposite the Upper Wharf, and supply themselves with Flour, Bacon, Beans, Overcoats, Blankets, Clothing, Rubber and Nailed Boots, and all other articles necessary for mining purposes before they embark for the Land of Promise.

MR. BRECKINRIDGE'S HABITS.—We had an interview with a gentleman and character who lives in Hopkinsville, Ky. He heard a lieutenant in the rebel army of John C Breckinridge say that Breckinridge was a drunkard. His intoxication was such that he was hardly ever able to attend to duties. On one occasion a number of soldiers were sent to destroy some barrels of whiskey, but Breckinridge ordered them to be brought to his quarters, and indulged in a drunken revel. When the army was ordered to march on Rochester River, he pretended to have been so badly that he had to stay behind at Russellville, dead drunk. The rebel army hated that the Confederates had confidence in him, and regarded him with distrust and contempt. Alas for ambition and folly! A few brief years and he seemed the petted child of fortune, and to-day he is a detested and abhorred, groveling in the very gutter of infamy.—Louisville Journal.

THE WHITE HOUSE.—Our "Washington Correspondent" sends us the following flash dispatch by telegraph:

"I drove up to the White House, the other day, and the Russian Ambassador would have taken him for an idiot if he had met him anywhere else in this country?"

"Not the Muscovite, who, like Old Hickory of a wag, "I should have taken him for a fool."

"Ah," exclaimed the President as he straightened up to his full attitude of six foot one, "that's the point!"

"Exactly so—Vanity Fair.

Mrs. Partington was in the habit of teaching the young idea how to shoot, by telling stories to her grand children in this way:

Further Details of the Great Battle at Pittsburg Landing

ST LOUIS, April 11th.—The Democrat has a special Cairo dispatch in relation to the battle of Pittsburg Landing which says: The disposition of the Confederates in their attack was in the form of the letter V. The point penetrated Prentiss' division, which consisted of raw recruits who could not stand the shock and fell back, causing great confusion among our troops in the left. This charge would have resulted in turning our left wing and the capture of a large portion of Prentiss and Sherman's divisions but for the gunboats Tyler and Lexington which beat the enemy back by firing into their ranks shell and shell. Great blame is attached to Generals Prentiss and Sherman, who it is said, had no scouts out, and only a very small picket guard. In formation of the approach of the rebel army in mass to have been given those Generals by persons from the country but it was disregarded. No preparations were made to receive the enemy. The onset of the rebels was terrible. By ten o'clock A. M. the whole line, from right to left, was engaged. Our line was five miles back of Pittsburg. We were driven back to the river. The slaughter was great. Officers who participated in the Donelson fight say that fight was in no way compared with this in severeness. The gunboats continued firing all Sunday night. Four o'clock Sunday afternoon General Buell marched to Pittsburg from Savannah. About this time a great part of his command reached the river opposite Pittsburg and rent the air with cheers. This inspired our men, who had been driven back with fury during the day, and the tide of affairs changed. A large body of Buell's forces were crossed Sunday evening and night by fifteen or twenty transports.

Sunday night Gen. Lew Wallace got up from Crump's Landing with 15,000 men. With this reinforcement the fight was renewed Monday morning. It raged the hottest from nine to two o'clock P. M. by which time a force of 4,000 men from Buell's army had crossed the river at Pittsburg.

One ravine between Hurlbert and Prentiss' divisions is said to have been literally filled with dead rebels. The rebel prisoners say they had orders to kill as many of our officers as possible.

A man who arrived here to-day says the rebels adopted a ruse to surprise our forces at Pittsburg. In making their first attack their head columns not only carried the stars and stripes but wore the uniform of federal officers and soldiers.

Gen. A. S. Johnston is certainly killed. Persons saw his body and heard the fact commented on through the camps. Gen. Bragg is reported killed, and John C. Breckinridge a prisoner, but this is unreliable. Provisional Governor Johnson, of Kentucky, is mortally wounded and a prisoner.

Our total loss in killed, wounded and missing, is seven thousand. This is the estimate of military men who were in the engagement. Of these about two thousand were taken prisoners. The balance of killed and wounded in the usual proportion.

Gen. Wallace, of Ottawa, Illinois, was reported killed, as it was deemed impossible for him to live after the close of the fight, but on Wednesday he was improving rapidly.

Our interment left the field at five o'clock Tuesday morning. The fight commenced on Sunday at six A. M. The enemy were said to 120,000 strong. Prentiss had no artillery. His brigade was cut to pieces and forced to retreat. At twelve o'clock noon, the entire line was fiercely engaged, but were in full retreat at four o'clock. Thousands of our soldiers had taken refuge under the bank of the river, utterly refusing to fight, in fact, they could not, for men and officers were in inextricable confusion. Our army seemed utterly demoralized.

About this time General Mitchell's division (15,000) arrived on the opposite bank of the river, and were ferried across during the evening and night. The gunboats Lexington and Tyler opened fire on the enemy, and kept it up every half hour during the night, saving the army from utter ruin. Their shell set the woods on fire, and many dead rebels were burned. At seven in the evening firing generally ceased. At midnight the rebels attempted to plant batteries within three hundred yards from the siege guns, but they were driven away by the gunboats and the siege guns, supported by three regiments of General Mitchell's division.

During Sunday night the rebels were reinforced by Price and Van Dorn from Arkansas, with a very large force. Gen. Lew Wallace came to our aid during the night with four regiments and a battery of artillery, and in the morning fiercely attacked the left wing of the enemy. They went into the fight in double-quick time, and shouting, and did terrible execution. By ten o'clock they had driven the rebels back two miles, where the rebels were reinforced. For a short time our force was compelled to fall back. Other divisions of Buell's army now appeared and at once became fully engaged. For two hours all the destructive elements of earth seemed struggling for mastery on the fatal field. At last Southern chivalry was compelled to yield to Northern gallantry. The enemy broke and fled, and were pursued by Buell's cavalry, numbering nearly ten thousand.

The rebel troops were mostly from Tennessee, Texas and Louisiana, with some from Georgia and Alabama. They fought like tigers. Our informant says he could ride through the battle field where our forces were posted but the dead were so thick in the enemy's lines that it was impossible to do it there. Rebels occupied our camps Sunday night and took care of our sick and wounded, but destroyed nothing, expecting confidently to have our entire army the next day. They thought the battle already won.

On Sunday Gen. McClernand's force was surrounded by an immense force of rebels but he cut his way through. His troop behaved with the greatest gallantry with the exception of the 14th and 43rd Ohio which were ordered to the rear in disgrace, for refusing to fight.

Further Details.

We give further details of the battle at Pittsburg. Taylor's and Waterhouse's batteries, supported by the Twenty third Illinois and Fifty second and Seventy seventh Ohio regiments opened the fight. These regiments formed a part of Sherman's division, and occupied the extreme right. But the Ohio regiments ran—the Seventy seventh without firing a gun—leaving Waterhouse entirely without support. He fought half an hour, however, retreating with three of his guns. Taylor continued to fight splendidly, supported by the Illinois regiment, until his support was out-flanked on both sides. He then retreated through a cross fire with the loss of 18 killed and 50 or ten wounded. He also lost twelve horses. His forge and battery wagon. Major Waterhouse took a second position with his three remaining guns supported by the second Brigade of McClernand's division. During the forenoon they were compelled to retire to a high ground where they met with heavy loss until the sun went down, when they formed a second line of battle. An advance was made resulting, after a most determined resistance on the part of the rebels, in their being driven back through our encampment where they met strong reinforcements. The ammunition of our forces having given out another brigade took their place. They in turn were driven back by the rebels to within a half a mile of the river. Our gunboats then opened fire, the wing shell over the heads of our men and covering the ground with rebel slain. Taylor's battery having taken a second position, opened on the rebel battery eight hundred yards distant. A splendid artillery duel took place resulting in silencing the rebel battery and blowing up the caisson. Taylor's battery was then ordered into the reserve. During the afternoon, several Mississippi regiments which arrived Saturday night were brought into the fight at a double quick and were almost immediately repulsed. The second day, all the batteries taken by the enemy on the previous day were recaptured with forty of their guns and our Michigan battery was recaptured by the Sixteenth Wisconsin. There was more fighting over this than all other batteries on the field. It was taken and retaken three or four times. The second capture was by Beauregard in person, who commanded three regiments. In the attack he received a bullet wound in the arm. Company A Chicago Light Artillery, was so severely handled on the first day that it could only bring three guns into the field on Monday. With these however they succeeded in completely silencing the rebel battery of six guns but were compelled to leave it on the field in consequence of lack of horses to bring the guns off. Their own guns were brought off by hand.

The general retreat commenced at dark on Monday. Our cavalry followed but a short distance beyond the position occupied by our troops before the battle. Were it not for the almost impassable condition of the roads the rout would have been made complete, and we would have occupied their intrenched camp at Corinth. The rebel artillery was considered superior to ours, and their small arms almost equal. The Eighth Iowa were taken prisoners almost en masse. The Fifty seventh and Seventy first Ohio, Eighteenth Wisconsin and Forty sixth Iowa are reported to have fled after firing two or three rounds. When the enemy fled they burned their wagons and left their wounded, all of whom are prisoners.

Our loss is now stated to be 10,000 killed and wounded and the rebel loss 15,000. One New Orleans regiment, the Louisiana Tigers, was almost entirely left on the battlefield either killed or wounded. Gen. Prentiss escaped Tuesday and came into camp at Crump's. In the confusion of the retreat he managed to elude rebel vigilance. He was wounded during the battle, but not seriously. It was the intention of Beauregard to make an attack two days before he did but the extraordinary rains impeded his progress.

The responsibility of the surprise rests with the commanding General. On Friday a large force of cavalry appeared within sight of our lines. Sherman, who occupied an advanced position, had been ordered not to bring on an engagement. Consequently, he sent out no force against them. They remained until Sunday morning, and served as a screen, behind which Beauregard formed his troops in order of battle undiscovered.
